ATTIVITÀ PROGETTUALE

Anno	Progetto
2017	“Worker Discretion and Performance: Evidence from a Real-Effort Experiment” Worker discretion is a crucial factor for productivity and optimal job design. The present research manipulates in a real-effort experiment both the degree and the type of flexibility that individuals have in completing a series of multiple tasks and it examines their consequences on final performance.
2018	“A Tale of Two Cities: an Experiment on Inequality and Cooperation” (joint with Maria Bigoni and Stefania Bortolotti) In an online experiment, we exploit the existing disparities in socio-economic status within an Italian city, to study how these differences correlate with preferences in strategic and non- strategic situations.
2017	“The Short and Long-term Effects of Monetary Incentives in Education” Scholarships and other types of monetary incentives decrease the costs of acquiring additional education. The main contribution of this work is to causally identifying, using a Regression Discontinuity Design, the effects of different levels of financial aids on enrollment into tertiary education, academic achievement after enrollment, and on labor market outcomes after graduation.
2018	“Identity in a Multicultural Society” (joint with Natalia Montinari and Ginevra Marandola) The research idea of this paper is based on the multidimensional view of identity. In particular, for immigrants’ identity is defined by both ethnic elements, linked to the country of origin, and by elements related to the host country. The objectives of the paper are to study how preferences and attitudes are influenced by specific dimensions of identity and to analyze how cooperation between individuals can be encouraged by making salient a unitary identity (e.g., living in the same city) rather than a fragmentary one (e.g., ethnicity). The aims are to improve the understanding of how identity affects preferences and behavior and to help in defining policies aimed at reducing social conflicts between different ethnic groups.
