Scientific activity:

1. His scientific research has been particularly directed towards the understanding of the relationships between the structure and function of complex lipid components of neuron cell membranes, and the role of plasma membranes in neuronal degeneration and cancer. In particular, using normal and pathological tissues/cells he studied -the primary structure of isolated gangliosides and glycosphingolipids, -the conformational, dynamic, geometrical and aggregative properties of the main gangliosides from nervous system, -the role of gangliosides in the organization of sphingolipid-enriched membrane domains, -the interaction processes between gangliosides and soluble or membrane proteins, - the metabolism of gangliosides, -the role of gangliosides in cell signalling, and -the role of plasma membrane glycohydrolases in modulating cell physiology.
