RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

Unit Member

2023 – ongoing

- I have been a member of the LUISS unit of the 2022 PRIN project NEWCOMING (New Conflicts' Mapping in the Age of Globalization) (P.I. Vincenzo Emanuele, LUISS, Rome)

Coordinator

2023

- During my tenure as Co-Coordinator of the Standing Group 'Candidate and Leader Selection' of the SISP (Italian Political Science Association), I was the coordinator of a team involved in the data collection in exit polls during the Democratic Party's leader selection race. The data collection project involved: assembling a team of people to recruit interviewers and perform the data collection in different Italian regions, contributing updating the questionnaire, contributing assembling the final dataset. The project resulted in a report (available here: <https://standinggroups.sisp.it/candidateleaderselection/2023/02/28/il-report-sulle-primarie-pd-2023/>) and its results appeared in media outlets such as Repubblica.it or Il Corriere della Sera.

Researcher

2019 – ongoing

- Have been co-organising an international team of scholars working/having worked in several Western European universities (e.g., University of Siena, University of Turin, Universitat de València, Aston University, University of Strathclyde) to update and widen the expert survey on the personalisation of politics originally devised in 2017. Within such a project, I was among the co-organisers of a one-day workshop at the University of Siena on topics related to the personalisation of politics.

Researcher

CISE – Italian Centre for Electoral Studies

- Was part of a small team collecting and processing data on electoral volatility in European Parliament elections since 1979. A final dataset was released after the 2019 European Parliament elections. I have also co-authored an article appeared on the Rivista Italiana di Scienza Politica/Italian Political Science Review using some data collected in such a research effort. For to this article, I was also awarded, jointly with the other authors, the 2021 Giovanni Sartori Prize (see below).

Researcher

2018 – 2021

Società Italiana di Scienza Politica

- Data collection on SPS/04 courses in Italian universities in the 2017-2018, 2018-2019, 2019-2020, and 2020-2021 academic years, on members of the Italian SPS/04 scientific community, and on students enrolled in a series of Political-Science-related Degrees. Compilation or update of the related datasets and data analysis. I have also co-authored an article appeared on Italian Political Science using some of the collected data.

Researcher 2018

Università di Siena

- Was part of a small team working on data collection and analysis related to the Italian parliamentary elite.

Researcher 2017

Scuola Normale Superiore, Italy

- Worked with a small team to: devise the first expert survey on the personalisation of politics in Western Europe (1985-2016); draft up lists of experts and parties; devise the questionnaire; deal with experts' queries; analyse the data; draft a working paper; co-authored an article appeared on Acta Politica in 2022 presenting some key results of the research and released a dataset in 2023.

Visiting Researcher (Chercheur Visiteur) 2017

CEVIPOL, Université Libre de Bruxelles

- Between February and April, during my visiting research period, I worked on the research related to my PhD dissertation and presented a presentation entitled 'Why do parties open their leader selection rules? An empirical puzzle and some tentative answers' to some CEVIPOL members.
