IMPACT OF MY RESEARCH

My research builds on methodologies and knowledge borrowed from archaeology, economics, history, law and political science, and it analyzes theoretically and empirically the determinants and impact of market design, legal traditions, property rights, a culture of cooperation, inclusive political institutions, extractive policies, and the state's fiscal capacity. The results of these projects have been featured on renowned research blogs, such as AEA, EHS, VOX, Harvard Law School Forum on Corporate Governance, Oxford Business Law Blog, JOIE, SIOE, Academic Times, and the World Bank websites, have produced innovative data sets published by Data in Brief [8 (2016): 394-398; 11 (2017): 557-561; 27 (2019): 104731], have been cited 590 times according to Google Scholar, 460 according to SSRN (top 1%) and 652 according to Research Gate. Furthermore, they have been discussed in the most widespread law and economics textbooks—e.g., Property: Principles and Policies by Merrill and Smith—and thought in top graduate courses in institutional economics, e.g., Giuseppe Dari-Mattiacci's "Contracts" at Columbia Law School and Guido Tabellini's "Political Economics" at Bocconi U. I have also been selected among the top worldwide institutional economists by Cambridge U Press to create—i.e., select editorial policies and board of—the Elements in "Law, Economics and Politics", whose impact factor we brought to 7.72 in three years, by Public Choice to join its editorial board, by PNAS to prepare a perspectives on climate change and state-building and by the Quat Sci Rev to prepare an opinion on societal collapse. Finally, from 2017, I have been chairing the ORIGINS group, which is currently financed by the 2022 PRIN grant and gathers such renowned scholars like G. Benati, F. Carugati, A. Hanssen, M. Onorato, F. Parisi, B. Weingast, G. Barjamovic, M. Bonechi, M. Jacobson, A. Palmisano, A. Squitieri, M. Widell, A. Bisin, M. Dincecco, J. Frieden, M. Levi, A. Monson and J. Ober.
