BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Dario Trapani, MD, is a practicing medical oncologist trained in Milan, presently enrolled in a clinical and research fellowship at Dana Farber Cancer Institute, Boston. Dario has a research interest for breast cancer, new drugs, health policy, global oncology and methodology of clinical trials. Dr Trapani has been trained in medical oncology at the University of Milan and at the European Institute of Oncology (Milan), mentored by prof Curigliano. He gained expertise in the conceptualization, analysis, development and deployment of early-phase clinical trials, with a disease-oriented interest in breast cancer. As a fellow at IEO, Dario has also worked as a sub-investigator for several phase 1 clinical trials. He has supported the development of innovative therapies with new small molecules and immune-checkpoint inhibitors, intra-tumor injective compounds, as single agents and in combination, in all the disease settings. He has contributed to the patient evaluation and care as a clinician, including in the early recognition, diagnosis and management of emerging or uncommon adverse effects. As a fellow at Dana Farber, Dario is working on clinical trial concepts aiming at preventing and overcoming endocrine resistance of advanced breast cancer, and enable better outcomes through strategies of improvement of the patient adherence to therapies in the early setting. As a chief resident and then as a fellow, Dario has worked under the principles of inclusive team working aiming at canalizing the group efforts and catalyze scientific initiatives, with an open attitude toward empowering value of diversity. Dr Trapani has then enrolled in a consultancy position for cancer policy at the World Health Organization headquarter in Geneva, for 2 years, where he has contributed to the tracks of prioritization and selection of cancer interventions – including for shaping benefits package of Universal Healthcare and Essential Medicines. The major focus at WHO was the development of evidence-based methodologies to develop and implement impactful national cancer control plans, based on a resource-stratified approach. Framing the continuum of this experience, Dr Trapani is a member of the PhD-candidates working group of AIFA, helping in the evaluation of clinical trial concepts and value of new cancer medicines for the clinical benefit-harm assessment. Presently, he sits in two high-level WHO committees, in the expert roster for Global Cancer Control, in one WHO Strategic Advisory Board of Experts (SAGE) and 2 technical Working Groups, including the Global Breast Cancer Initiative. As a clinician, Dario is involved in the clinical research for breast cancer. He has also joined recently the Harvard Medical School PORTAL (policy and regulations) group, working on the evaluation of breast cancer medicines. Dario has worked on a number of scientific publications and technical reports, and supported several meetings, including in speaker position. He is member of ESMO, ASCO, AIOM, ESO and presently serves ESMO in multiple committees. Dr Trapani has interest in the evaluation and implementation of clinically relevant and patient-centered endpoints in the clinical research for (breast) cancer care, including for the treatment customization and pertinently to the global cancer control, including and not limited in low- and middle-income countries, and to accelerate progress toward regulatory purposes and deliver better patient care.
