TRAINING OR RESEARCH ACTIVITY

As a Research Assistant at the Mediterranean Agronomic Institute of Chania, department of Horticulture Genetics and Biotechnology in the academic year 2019-2020, my main involvement centered around investigating the salinity tolerance of Greek olive trees (Olea europaea). I concurrently assisted master's students with plant molecular biology for various crops (Solanum lycopersicum and Arabidopsis thaliana), encompassing data analysis and scientific writing.

Presently, I am actively contributing as a research fellow (borsista) at Scuola Superiore Sant'Anna, focusing on postharvest studies of perishable fruits. My responsibilities involve diverse tasks aimed at assessing the physiological, biochemical, and molecular responses of fruits, contributing to the overall quality of fruits at the end of the storage period.

Key activities include:

Storage optimization:

- Managing and optimizing storage conditions, including temperature and humidity control, to prolong shelf life and maintain fruit freshness.

Research Laboratory Expertise:

- Proficient in plant physiology, plant molecular biology, plant biotechnology techniques, biochemical lab procedures, postharvest quality assessments, metabolomics analysis, and the utilization of various laboratory instruments (QTRAP+, GC FID, GC-MS).

Data Analysis and Statistics:

- Skilled in R and RStudio, JMP Data Analysis Software, coding in R, and using GraphPad Prism.

Imaging Proficiency:

- Competent in ImageJ and possesses basic elements knowledge of Adobe Photoshop.

PROJECT ACTIVITY
